

PERSONAL INJURY LAWSUITS

Offices throughout New York, New Jersey and Connecticut

Seriously Injured?

You may have the right to seek monetary damages!

Representing union members, their families and friends throughout New York State for over 55 years.

How long will your case take?

We do not control the length of the process.

Once your doctors have provided us with your final medical reports and extent of your injuries, we will try to settle your case. If the insurance company does not offer a fair settlement, we will start a lawsuit on your behalf. If we do start a lawsuit, the time it takes to reach a conclusion will depend upon the judge assigned to your case.

How will you know the status of your case?

You will be provided with the direct phone numbers and email addresses of your case manager and attorney.

We also offer Cyberfile, our secure, web-based case management system.

When you sign up for Cyberfile, you will be sent an email each time your file is updated and you can track the progress of your case any time day or night.

Why do you need an attorney?

- ✓ You will receive a dedicated personal injury attorney to investigate your claim.
- ✓ Our attorneys have decades of experience and know the laws relevant to personal injury claims.
- ✓ Fine, Olin & Anderman, LLP prides itself on being firm to get a fair settlement – that is why insurance companies settle over 97% of our cases.

What is a Personal Injury Lawsuit?

A personal injury can occur anywhere: in your car, at work, at a restaurant, in the hospital, or simply walking down the street.

Personal injury lawsuits are intended to obtain compensation for past and future medical bills, lost wages and pain and suffering.

The most common personal injury lawsuits involve auto collisions, work-related injuries, defective products, and negligence or malpractice. The injuries resulting from these scenarios can severely impact a person's future due to disabling head and brain injuries, spinal cord injuries, knee injury or paralysis, broken bones, or chronic pain.

How much is your case worth?

The answer to this question depends on various factors, such as:

- ✓ The result of investigations
- ✓ Which insurance company is on the other side
- ✓ The amount of the defendant's insurance coverage
- ✓ The full extent of your physical injuries, lost wages and medical expenses

When we think an offer is fair, we will advise you.

If we believe you are not likely to get more money by going forward in your lawsuit, we will recommend that you settle.

Disbursements & Expenses

Disbursements and expenses are monies that Fine, Olin & Anderman, LLP will arrange to be paid on your behalf during your case in order to advance your claim. At the end of the case, the firm is reimbursed by deducting these costs from the gross settlement. We do this so that you do not have to pay for your expenses out of pocket ahead of time.
